LONG AGO.

Preparations That are Made for the Judgment Day at the End of the Year 1000.

The laborers in the fields and the artisans in the towns could not be induced to go about their daily tasks with any regularity (notwithstanding their daily bread dependent upon it), for thinking the outbreak of Divine wrath which was about to take place. There were some wise and sober men, even in that darkest age of ignorance, who endeavored to persuade the people that their alarm was without reason or foundation, and even if it had been otherwise, that it would still benefit them to go about the duties of life with diligence and faithfulness, as unto God—that should he come, as they expected, might find them watching. The terrified and conscience-stricken people, however, remonstrances like these, but gathered eagerly around fanatic monks or half-crazed pilgrims, who poured into their ears their tale of horrors, ever growing more wild and terrible as the last week of the year 1000 went by.

When the last day of that week dawned, the maddest had stained his helmet. At work of whatever kind, was suspended. The market places were deserted; the shops were shut; the tables were not spread for meals; the very household fires were not kindled. When they met in the streets, scarcely saw or spoke to one another. Their eyes had a wild stare in them, as though they expected every moment some terrible manifestation to take place. A strange unnatural silence prevailed everywhere, except in the churches; which were already thronged with devotees, who prostrated themselves before the shrines of their favorite saints, imploring their protection during the fearful scenes which were on the point of being displayed. As the day wore on, the number of those who sought admission grew greater and greater, until every corner of the sacred edifices, large as these were, was densely crowded, and it became impossible to find room for more. But the multitude outside still stood and waited for admission, filling the porches and doorways and climbing up the buttresses to find a refuge on the roofs, which they could not obtain inside. It was generally believed that the gates of heaven would be opened at some time or other before the night was ended, but at what precise moment no one could say. A strange solent silence reigned in the streets, which bids men to watch because "they know not whether the master of the house will come at seven, or at cock crow, or in the morning," was presented by the multitudes which filled the churches, that night.

Watch in very truth they did. Not an eye was closed throughout that long vigil; not a knee bent in humble supplication; not a voice but joined the impatient chant of prayer, or put up a fervent entreaty for help and protection. There were no clocks in these days; but the flight of hours was marked by great waxen tapers which metal bells rang out from them. Whenever the place adjoining express office, 7th St. Formerly Russellville street.

At last the night, long as it was, began to draw to an end. The chill which precedes daylight prevailed in the streets, and the first pale gleam of morning began to show itself. This must be the signal for the long pent-up anger of Heaven to show itself. Satan was even now being loosed from his bondage.
But no; the light grew stronger in the heavens, and the flames of the candles paled before it, and at last the rays of the risen sun stream through the windows, and for the first time the anxious faces of the watchers.
The night had passed away. A new day, a new year, a new century had begun. The terror which possessed their souls was, after all, God be thankful for it, a delusion.

An Honest Physician's Candid Ac- knowledgment.

Occasionally there are candid and fearless men in the medical profession who, though strict adherents and ex-ponents of a professional "ethic," are yet too noble-minded to be hampered by prejudice and superstition about "medical" or "humanity" is concerned, men who will speak the truth as they know it in behalf of anything, and to whom a proprietary medicine is not a scare-crow nor a bucardo, simply because it goes by that name, but who investigate its merits by experiments, and when it proves to be what it claims to be, at once step to the front and frankly acknowledge its merits and commend it to suffering humanity everywhere.
Such a man is Dr. J. N. Cheney, an eminent and well known physician, living at Elizaville, Schley county, Georgia, who, in a letter to the Swift Specific Company, dated March 21, 1887, says, in reference to their famous medicine:

"Your S. S. S. medicine has revolutionized the old school practice of medicine. I have held it in my hand and I am a faithful disciple. The danger of mercurial treatment for blood poison is known to all. The profession has for centuries sought a harmless cure, but in vain, until it had become a settled belief that it could only be cured by mineral and dangerous treatment. But in your medicine a safe and harmless cure for the worst forms of blood poisoning has been found.
I have never failed to make a safe, perfect and permanent cure where the patients have followed your directions faithfully." eases mailed free. The Swift Specific Co., Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.

OBITUARY.

Died of erysipelas, on the 14th of the present month, at his home in Christian county, Ky. Mr. Benjamin Franklin Pepper. Deceased was about 65 years of age. He was a son of Thos. Pepper, and was born and raised in Todd county, a short distance east of his late residence. He was married about the year 1846 to Miss Lucy A. Robinson, daughter of A. H. and grand-daughter of Abner Robinson, one of the early and highly respected settlers of this county.

Mr. Pepper owned and occupied the farm known as the "Pennington Place"; where by industry and economy he surrounded his home with the comforts and conveniences of life.
He was a good financier and hard times was a stranger at his house.
Although a modest, quiet man, he was fond of company and his home was the resort of many friends, both old and young. All shared a warm welcome, even the stranger felt the warmth of his hospitality.

He was a member of the Baptist Church, and an earnest and devoted christian, who had attained the rest-fulness of faith. If he had an enemy the writer is sure that it was because that enemy did not know him.

His wife, for many years, was a constant invalid, was the object of his faithful and tender care, whose every want as far as possible, was supplied.

During the last illness physicians and kind friends did all that could be done. His wife, though sick herself, stood by and faithfully ministered to him to the end.

At noon on the 14th, a large concourse gathered and a discourse was made by Rev. J. T. Barrow, of Hopkinsville, in which a fitting tribute was paid the deceased. Then the remains, followed by a long procession, were borne to the last resting place in the old family burial ground, near the home of deceased's childhood.

The example of his life is worthy of our imitation. He leaves a wife, sister, two brothers, many relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

FOREST TREE SEEDS.

The Proper Way of Preserving Them
During the Winter.

Many of those who attempt to raise forest trees from the seed meet with disappointment, from not preserving the seeds properly, or from not knowing that some trees ripen their seeds in spring or early summer, and that these must be sown as soon as ripe.
The same goes sometimes has species that have this peculiarity, while others ripen in the fall in the usual manner.
Thus, while the seeds of the swamp red maple, and those of the silver maple, ripen in the spring or early summer, the sugar and other maple ripen their seeds in the autumn, and must be kept until the following spring. Much of the success in raising forest trees from seeds depends upon having the seeds properly preserved during the winter. They must not be allowed to get too dry, nor must the moisture and temperature be such that germination will be commenced before they are sown, nor should they be exposed to such a low temperature that the vitality of the embryo will be impaired. When in doubt how to best preserve a tree seed, mix it with about twice its bulk of damp sand—not wet sand, but good sharp sand, just dug out of a bank.
The seed thus mixed with sand should be placed where it will be at an even temperature of a few degrees above freezing, and where mice and other vermin may not get at it. Nuts of the hard-shelled kind, especially, should not be allowed to get dry; the hickories, walnuts and butternuts should be placed in heaps of a few bushels, and carefully covered with sods from an old pasture, and the roof covered with several inches of earth. If turf is not readily procured, cover the heap with straw and place this several inches of soil. These heaps must be in a dry place, where water will not accumulate, and in one where vermin will not disturb them.
Chestnuts, which are very apt to get too dry, may be preserved in sand, as mentioned above.—American Agriculturist.

Girls in the Antipodes.

The Australian girl is tall and slender. She lacks somewhat in complexion, but generally she is pretty.
The Victorian girl is decidedly good-looking. The New Zealand girl has a far better complexion than the Australian girl, and is fresher and more healthy perhaps, for the climate is milder. She resembles the English girl much more than does the Australian, and her development keeps pace with the former. But Tasmania is said to be the home of beauty, and it certainly seems to have more than its share of fair maidens. It is not at all uncommon for the Melbourne to run across to the little island for the purpose of enjoying a well-earned holiday and "picking up" a wife.— St. James' Gazette.

Worth Knowing.

Mr. W. H. Morgan, merchant, Lake City, Fla., was taken with a severe cold, attended with a distressing cough and running into consumption in its first stages. He tried many so-called popular cough remedies and steadily grew worse. Was reduced in flesh, had difficulty in breathing and was unable to sleep. Finally tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and found immediate relief, and after using about a half dozen bottles found himself well and able to resume his usual duties. No other remedy can show so grand a record of cures, as Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Guaranteed to do just what is claimed for it.

GREENWOOD CEMETERY.

A Graphic Description of New York's Famous City of the Dead.

Imagine that you are in Greenwood Cemetery. It is a big place of about 600 acres, with twenty-two miles of carriage track, eighteen miles of pathway, 25,000 burial lots and 240,000 persons have been buried here since 1840. It is a beautiful place, you say, naturally full of gulches and knolls, all of which have been utilized to their fullest extent by time and money. It has eight lakes, each with a fountain, and the grass—just felt of it—is soft as green plush. Natural trees are supplemented by planted ones, all trimmed and trained to their best behavior, but you will notice the fewest flowers you ever saw in a cemetery.
It looks as though those buried in Greenwood disdained so "cheap" an ornament as flowers. See that purple hydrangea. First you ever saw?
Same with me. The lake tells all day, and that, with the suggestive creak of the chisel, mingling with the chirp of the grasshoppers and the grind of the carriage wheels, are the sounds which break the stillness of this vast city of the dead.

The huge receiving tomb is capable of holding 15,000 bodies. Beecher is lying in there now waiting for the completion of the subscription list.
Here lies John Roach, the great shipbuilder, who recently died of a disease similar to that which carried off Grant. Here is a monument erected by an old son captain fifteen years prior his death. See that monument like a temple. I forget whose it is, but it was made by the prisoners at Sing Sing and is a magnificent piece of workmanship. That Schornerhorn lot is on property owned by the family before the cemetery was incorporated, and with the large round lot below, where the row of headstones is ranged.
That was once a whole churchyard and burying ground. When the church had to be moved the bones were collected in one spot and these stones and this monument erected to their memory.

Here is the most expensive and at the same time the most interesting monument on the grounds. It is that of a young lady who, on her seventeenth birthday, was thrown from her carriage and killed while on her way to a ball. In the monument is cut a life-sized likeness of the girl, representing her just as she was arrayed for the fatal festival. The lace, ribbons, flowers and jewels of her costume are faithfully reproduced in the alabaster, at a cost of $45,000. Here is a monument and bronze bust of Horacio Greely, the pedestal representing a rough plough, a pen and scroll, and the young Greely at his printing case.
There is the monument of the Browns, bankers, six of whom were lost together at sea. It is descriptive of the catastrophe. The fireman's monument is surmounted by the figure of a fireman holding a little child in his arms and a pen and scroll, and the young Greely at his printing case.

But the most curious thing in interment is that of five maiden ladies—sisters—whose ages ranged from one hundred to one hundred and seventeen years, and who all died within a few years of each other. The lot in which they are buried is called the "Old Maids' Plot." This tomb of G. E.
Garrett, ex-Mayor of San Francisco, is a beautiful thing in Oriental design.
This wonderful monument to George Law is a testimonial to a man of pluck. When a young fellow he walked through the streets of New York wanting a meal. Passing by some new building he saw a hoodnigger carrier fall off dead at his feet.
Hungry George applied for the job and got it. The Soldiers' Monument is an object of interest in any cemetery, but this of Greenwood outtops any thing I ever saw. The huge spire is effective in black and gray. Figures representing the four divisions of the army were cast of captured cannon. A unique fence is made of guns with fixed bayonets. A sad sight is this large circular lot in which are buried one hundred and five unrecognizable victims of the Brooklyn Theatre fire, 1876. Greenwood is a great museum of mortality.—Fannie Edgar Thomas, in Kansas City Star.

This old and tried institution has had a very large attendance this winter, both of ladies and gentlemen, and no wonder, for it is one of the most thorough and reliable business colleges in the West. Prof. S. N. Curran, the principal, is thoroughly conversant with business practices and office work, as he was for 35 years connected with the wholesale business of Evansville. Every department of the college is carefully conducted on practical business principles. Book-keeping, Penmanship, Business Mathematics, Correspondence, Business Forms Filing, Training Short-hand, Type Writing, all thoroughly taught, so that the conscientious student receives a real business education worth ten times its cost. Those wishing a com-
